about me

Hello! My name is Megan, and I am a single woman who has had many rich and varied life experiences. My lifelong career is massage therapy. Within this, I have started and built two community centered businesses, a coffee shop and natural food deli. My early adult life saw me traveling the world as a professional athlete. I am still an active athlete, but now I go outside to simply enjoy rather than to train and compete. A typical day in my life now includes dancing to a song a day, playing with my dog, listening to music and podcasts on a variety of subjects, cooking classic dinners, creating healthy sweets, and watching the planets move through the night sky. My extra time is spent meeting up with friends and family for hiking, having tea, making dinner, playing games, and helping out whenever needed. I look forward to road trips and vacations.

MY HOME & PET

I live in a small, active, and creative mountain community that has a great school system and opportunities for kids of all interests, including higher education, theater, arts, sports, dancing. People in my community share the common interests of connection to the outdoor environment via skiing, rock climbing, biking, and boating. My dog, Pablo, and I easily get outside for some time each day adventuring into the beauty of wildflowers, mountains, and snow, but we also like the park and town for socializing with the greater community. We greatly value being at home, eating good food while resting, creating, dreaming, and planning the tomorrow to come.

WHAT LED ME TO ADOPTION

I always had a desire to live my own life a bit before settling down to have a child. With that and my need to create a stable life for my desired family, the years passed by until now, where I have found that being single is no longer a reason to wait any longer. I am financially stable and completely ready to devote my life to helping another grow into their own life. From a youth of babysitting many children of many different families, I am intimate with the different stages of infancy and childhood, the fun and the challenges all of them hold, and the beauty of seeing children turn into adults.

my family & traditions

I have two extended families. My immediate family reaches out from my mother, father, brother, and sisters to my many aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, and cousins, all of whom I can say I know quite well from my family's dedication to spending time together since my childhood. We all strive to share the holidays and work breaks together with an annual family reunion of deeper extended family.

My other family is my group of friends and neighbors who have been with me through my adult life when, in my twenties I moved to the other side of the state from my family home. This part of my family is who I am around daily: getting groceries for each other, sharing resources, and moving through daily life in support of each other as a tribe. At this stage my family/tribe is of many generations, and they can't wait to help me bring another child into our community of love, kindness, sharing, caring, openness, creativity, stability, teaching, learning, compassion, and expression.

Dear Expectant Mother,

I can only touch into where you are in your life right now, which means I can imagine but I don't pretend to know. What I do know is that I already think very highly of you for considering adoption for the child that grows in your belly. You embracing the birth and release of this child into life brings tears of strength to my being. I hope you are also doing this for the betterment of your future as your future is an open book and will surprise you far more than you are experiencing right now if you have trust in it.

If you choose me, I promise you I am here for this child and your child's life will be surrounded with unconditional love, support, and encouragement in living their life to the fullest. Thank you for holding strong in your position in life right now, your ability to move forward with what is best, and your openness to consider me as the adoptive mother of your child. I purely want to share the solid foundation I had as a child and have now in my life as an adult with another so they can live life to the fullest.

WITH LOVE,

MEGAN
